

Abstract

Disclosed is a method for controlling and monitoring the production of thermoplastic extrusion profiles, particularly in an in-line production process comprising a printing step, using an optical neuro-fuzzy-structured computer-designed image data-bank. The in-line production process is controlled and regulated from a central control desk in connection with an inspection device.